

STRESS-FREE ONLINE ACTIVITIES AND BIRDING INFO

List compiled by Bexar Audubon during the 2020 pandemic.

Enjoy this fun and informative article from Porch.com: Build Your Own Birdhouse for Your Backyard Birding Hobby.

Find some great suggestions for making the outdoors more exciting for kids of all ages! Visit the activities page at the Stop Nature-Deficit Disorder website. More ideas are listed in an article from Jenny Miller on our Outreach page.

Here is a huge list of backyard bird feeder and bird-watching activities for kids from ADayInOurShoes.com.

Discover five great Leave No Trace educational resources.

Your kids will love these Ranger Rick craft activities.

National Geographic for Kids offers a wealth of fun and informative activities.

Practices and Nature of Science explores the big hows and whys of science with videos and more for grades Pre-K through college.

PBS Nature Games for kids are fun and educational.

Explore the Museum of Natural History here.

DIY Growing Up Wild & Starting Out Wild lessons are added weekly here.

Inspire a lifetime of learning and discovery with this free, fun educational program for children ages 2 to 7 years.

Audubon offers weekly interactive lessons for kids here.

Watch curated videos on the website "The Kid Should See This," which offers entertaining science-based information and how-tos for kids to explore with their parents.

Read a Missouri photographer's story about how native plants brings birds to his yard.

A writer shares how being in quarantine helped her understand the magic of birds. Read it here.

Bird Bingo, anyone? Bird Watcher's Digest is offering free printable Bird Bingo cards on their website.

Cards are available by region of the U.S. so you'll recognize birds from the area where you live.

The Witte Museum also has a downloadable bingo card featuring backyard birds.

There are lots of ways everyone can contribute to saving the environment; check out this HomeAdvisor page for steps, big and small, that families can take to save resources indoors and maintain a healthy ecosystem outside.

"Ode to a Toad," "Notes on Ball Moss," and other poetic thoughts by environmental writer Mobi Warren.

Birdy Care Package from National Audubon Society.

Abundance of fun activities from Cornell Lab of Ornithology.

Cornell Lab's Bird Academy Classes provide great info.

Visit the new Birds of the World website from Cornell Lab.

Fantastic Audubon resources for kids in Grades 3-6.

Here are 10 nature activities to keep your kids entertained—and they might learn something, too!

National Wildlife Federation has made all of its online educational curriculum and Ranger Rick activities open-access: click here.

For instant relaxation, check out Texas Parks and Wildlife's Postcard from Texas series, starting with Coastal Prairie Morning. Access all of them here.

Zoo School shows you how to make a bird feeder.

Resources developed for World Migratory Bird Day; many are suitable for children (games, coloring pages, activities, etc.) and are FREE downloads, with several in English and Spanish.

Learn how to make a rain garden. Detailed instructions and plant guides can be downloaded for free by clicking here to view a low impact development manual from the Greater Edwards Aquifer Alliance.

Help your child build a bird blind. Read advice from a Young Birders Club parent.